

Joel & Rebecca JESSEN

Greetings from Germany!

We are delighted to send an update about what is going on in this part of the world. It's been a busy year for our ministry and family life. Praise the Lord, our family is doing well, and we feel that we have established good rhythms with the kids.

We are in the final part of our transition into full-time ministry with Cadence, which is the partnership development and support-raising phase. We are grateful for how God is providing ministry partners as we walk in faith toward this goal. Regarding financial support, we are currently at forty percent and still need a few more partners. Would you pray about joining our team with a monthly donation? For those of you who already give financially, thank you! We cannot do this without you. We have been encouraged relationally by the love we have been shown and the importance that others see in the gospel ministry in which we are engaged. Thank you for your support.

his workplace, Dave felt isolated. An invitation from an acquaintance led him to our Bible study, which he described as an answer to his prayers. When I asked how Bible study has encouraged him since being here, he said: "Specifically, I can go into the next week, or even the next day, with a newfound sense of direction, purpose, and desire to share the Word." Having him in our group has been a blessing to all of us, including his piano skills!

As Dave and I talked about this letter, he gave some examples of how God has grown him and how Christian fellowship has challenged and matured him. Observing him live for Christ in the military has been such an encouragement. Dave actively shares the gospel and lives out his Christian values at work, and his steadfast commitment to living out his faith has not gone unnoticed. Dave has received recognition and increased responsibilities and has been able to have honest conversations about life with his colleagues. Some of them are difficult conversations, yet he has found opportunities to point people to Jesus Christ. Please pray for his continued efforts to share the gospel and be a light in his workplace and for us as we walk alongside him.

We do not have access within the military community to the same people and places as those in our ministry. Sharing the gospel and our lives with those around us is of great significance because those who have received the gospel will respond in kind and share openly in their respective circles of influence.

We are grateful for you!

In Christ,
Joel & Rebecca Jessen

We would like to share with you the story of an Airman who is part of our ministry in Germany. Meet Dave! Dave was born in the Philippines and moved to the U.S. when he was young. He was raised in a Christian family, attended a good local church, and accepted Christ before leaving home. His faith was strengthened while attending college, and he joined the military with a firm foundation of faith. Upon arriving in Germany and being the sole Christian in
